AT SEWE, CHEFS AND FARMERS CELEBRATE CERTIFIED SC

CHARLESTON EVENT FEATURED FARMERS, CHEFS ON STAGE TOGETHER

BY EVA MOORE

The Southeastern Wildlife Exposition brings thousands of people to downtown Charleston to celebrate conservation, wildlife and sporting – and to learn more about Certified South Carolina foods and farmers.

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture set up an enormous tent decorated to look like a red barn in the middle of Marion Square and filled it with Certified SC vendors and products. Members of the South Carolina Specialty Food Association sold their wares to throngs of visitors. The heart of the tent was the Fresh on the Menu cooking demonstration stage, where chefs from some of the state’s finest restaurants demonstrated how to cook their favorite dishes – and were joined by the farmers, fishermen and other producers whose products they use.

Matt Lee and Ted Lee, Charleston’s own Lee Brothers, help curate the stage each year and act as emcees.

Commissioner of Agriculture Hugh Weathers kicked off the first day of cooking demonstrations on stage with Pastry Chef Kelly Wilson of the Culinary Institute of Charleston, and farmer A.J. Freeman of Freeman Farm on Johns Island. Chef Kelly made hand pies using venison and root vegetables from Freeman Farm.

Other farmer-chef pairings on the Fresh on the Menu stage included:

- 2023 James Beard Awards semifinalist Chef Daniel “Dano” Heinze of Vern’s in Charleston with farmer Jonathan Cox of Lowcountry Fungi
- Gullah Geechee Home Cooking author and chef Emily Meggett with farmer Greg Johnsman of Marsh Hen Mill
- Chef Rashaunda Grant of The Carolina Cookery with farmer Jed Watson of Watsonia Farms

We’re already anticipating next year’s lineup, so add SEWE to your calendar for 2024!

COMMISSIONER’S CORNER

HUGH E. WEATHERS

SOUTH CAROLINA COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE

FARMER BOOTCAMP

Last week our department helped host an important event that can grow the ranks of farmers in South Carolina, and at the same time, support military veterans.

Farmer Bootcamp is a two-day intensive for servicemembers who are transitioning out of the military and would like to explore a career in agribusiness.

This project is in cooperation with Palmetto Veterans in Agribusiness, an organization connected with the Farmers Veteran Coalition of South Carolina.

Through this two-day training event, servicemen and women interested in farming or some other form of agribusiness have the opportunity to get hands-on experience and to meet with ag experts.

The vets spend one day in the classroom, where they learn about business planning, resources, grants, marketing, our Agribusiness Center for Research and Entrepreneurship (ACRE) program, and more. They spend the second day on the farm. It’s become something of a tradition at this workshop for the group to learn to process a chicken – and take the meat home with them. They also generally learn about beekeeping, hydroponic growing and other cool agribusiness ventures.

The latest farm day was hosted by one of our own employees, Army veteran Jay Boutchyard, who grows specialty crops including peppers, muscadines, and other crops in Lexington County. His farm is part of Homegrown by Heroes and a Certified South Carolina member.

Palmetto Veterans in Agribusiness also has an agribusiness internship program for veterans. And this year they will be hosting a Veteran Agribusiness Outreach Fair. For more information about these programs, please visit palmettovetsinag.org.

Anything we can do to support those who have given of themselves to protect is a priority for us.

Let me switch gears by offering congratulations to the Port of Charleston. In 2022, SC Ports moved nearly 2.8 million TEUs (twenty-foot equivalent units), a 1.5% increase over 2021. (TEUs are the way we measure the number of shipping containers handled through the ports.) Every time I visit the port, I’m impressed. Not only do they continue to innovate to keep South Carolina farmers and agribusinesses competitive in the international market – they keep putting up big numbers.

This week is the official start of spring – but in South Carolina, that means it started feeling like spring about a month ago. I’m certainly looking forward to fresh strawberries soon, and all the great spring and summer produce to come. Reminds us why it’s good to live here.

Hugh Weathers

SOUTH CAROLINA FARMERS SELLING FOOD THROUGH NEW PROGRAM

LFPA PROGRAM CONNECTS UNDERSERVED PRODUCERS, COMMUNITIES

South Carolina farmers have new outlets for their products thanks to a new federally funded program operating in the state.

The Local Food Purchase Assistance program is a cooperative agreement between the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Agricultural Marketing Service and the South Carolina Department of Agriculture (SCDA). SCDA and the Catawba Nation collaborated on the program application and were awarded $6.1 million in LFPA funds in late 2022. SCDA is responsible for administering $4.7 million of that total.

Using these federal funds, SCDA is contracting with aggregators to buy food from local, socially disadvantaged producers to distribute, free of charge, to underserved populations within the state.

USDA defines socially disadvantaged producers as farmers or ranchers who have been subject to discrimination on the basis of race, color, sex, national origin, age, or disability. This definition may include Black farmers, Hispanic farmers, women farmers, veteran farmers diagnosed with PTSD, and others. The federal program is intended to help these producers build capacity and connect with new markets.

In addition to increasing consumption of local, healthy, and culturally unique foods, SCDA hopes this program will help expand economic opportunity and transform the state's food system in the long term.

The aggregators are responsible for distributing food purchased through the program to underserved communities in the state. Practically, this means food may be distributed in 24 South Carolina underserved counties: Abbeville, Aiken, Allendale, Bamberg, Barnwell, Cherokee, Clarendon, Colleton, Dillon, Edgefield, Georgetown, Greenwood, Hampton, Horry, Jasper, Lee, Marion, Marlboro, McCormick, Oconee, Orangeburg, Pickens, Union, and Williamsburg. Outside of the 24 counties listed above, food may be distributed in any other area of South Carolina that is rural or where people are adversely affected by persistent poverty or inequality.

Twelve aggregators are currently participating in the program:

- Bonita Global LLC
- Feed & Seed Co.
- Francis Produce Company
- Freshlist LLC
- GrowFood Carolina
- Gullah Farmers Cooperative
- Lowcountry Food Bank
- Pick 42 Foundation, Inc.
- SC Black Farmers Coalition
- Senn Brothers Inc.
- Swamp Rabbit Café and Grocery
- Taylor Boys' Produce Inc.

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture is still seeking more farmers to participate. Interested producers should fill out the Producer Registration Form located online at agriculture.sc.gov/lfpa.

Nonprofit food pantries, schools and other groups engaged in food distribution can also register online and be connected with participating aggregators. Interested distributors should fill out the Partner Distributor Registration Form located online at agriculture.sc.gov/lfpa.

ANNOUNCING CLIMATE-SMART GROWN IN SC

A COLLABORATION BETWEEN CLEMSON UNIVERSITY, SC STATE UNIVERSITY, AND 27 PARTNER ORGANIZATIONS IN SOUTH CAROLINA, FUNDED BY USDA'S BUILDING PARTNERSHIPS FOR CLIMATE-SMART COMMODITIES INITIATIVE

The two land-grant institutions of South Carolina, Clemson University and SC State University, have partnered on a pilot project funded by the USDA-NRCS Partnerships for Climate-Smart Commodities. For the purposes of the award opportunity, a 'climate-smart commodity' is defined as an agricultural commodity that is produced using agricultural (farming, ranching, or forestry) practices to reduce greenhouse gas emissions or sequester carbon. The goal of this project is to increase the acreage and number of farmers using climate-smart practices like cover cropping, prescribed grazing, reduced tillage, and other conservation tactics. This project will provide technical assistance and financial incentives to farmers to enable adoption of these climate-smart practices and employ marketing specialists to analyze new market opportunities for the resulting products and help create new opportunities for the agricultural community across the state. The initial pilot of this project will focus on production of peanuts, leafy greens, forages for beef cattle, and forest products.

PROGRAM WEBSITE

Here you will find more information on the award, a quick contact form, a grower interest form, and detailed information on incentives and conservation practices associated with each of the four commodities. Go to: climatesmartsc.org

LOCAL STAKEHOLDERS SOUGHT TO GUIDE WATER PLANNING IN SOUTH CAROLINA'S UPPER SAVANNAH RIVER BASIN

BY SCDNR

The S.C. Department of Natural Resources (SCDNR) has announced dates for two public meetings to provide citizens with an overview of a new water planning framework that will help guide surface water management in the Upper Savannah River basin over the next 50 years.

The meetings will also serve as venues for engaging volunteers interested in serving on a council that will develop and implement the plan for the Upper Savannah River basin. Meetings are scheduled in Anderson at Tri-County Technical College (Anderson Campus) on Monday, April 10 and in McCormick at Hickory Knob State Park on Tuesday, April 11. Both meetings will be held from 6–8 pm.

In March 2018, SCDNR established the State Water Planning Process Advisory Committee to help draft a “framework” document that will guide the development of individual river basin plans for each of the state’s eight major river basins. The Planning Process Advisory Committee includes representatives from a wide range of organizations, including the S.C. Department of Health and Environmental Control, Clemson University’s S.C. Water Resources Center, municipal and rural water systems, conservation groups, power companies and agricultural interests. In 2019, the group completed a report, the “South Carolina State Water Planning Framework,” which describes the river basin planning process and the intended contents of a river basin plan.

“The Planning Framework represents a foundation for the development of regional and state water plans, which are essential for our continued economic growth and protection of the resources and environment that we all share,” said Ken Rentiers, deputy director for SCDNR’s Land, Water & Conservation Division.

Each river basin plan will be created and overseen by a river basin council, a working group of stakeholders with water interests in the basin. River basin councils in the Edisto, Broad, Saluda, and Pee Dee River basins have already been established and planning activities in those basins are ongoing. The Upper Savannah River basin has been selected as the next basin to implement the new planning framework, while planning activities in the Lower Savannah-Salkehatchie basin are scheduled to begin later this year.

At its most fundamental level, a river basin plan will address four basic questions:

1. What is the basin’s current available water supply and demand?
2. What are the current permitted and registered water uses within the basin?
3. What will be the water demand in the basin throughout the Planning Horizon (50-year planning period) and will the available water supply be adequate to meet that demand?

4. What water management strategies will be employed in the basin to ensure the available supply meets or exceeds future projected demand?

As stated in the Planning Framework, “Answering the fourth question is the heart of the water-planning process and greatly benefits from cooperation and consensus among all stakeholders throughout the basin. A successful and equitable river basin plan addresses the effects all water users have on one another and on the resource.”

Public involvement is critical to the goal of ensuring that future generations of South Carolinians have secure, well-managed supplies of our most critical natural resource—water. You can download a copy of the “South Carolina State Water Planning Framework” and learn more about the Planning Process Advisory Committee and the research underpinning this initiative at: hydrology.dnr.sc.gov/state-and-river-basin-planning.html.

USDA PROPOSES NEW REQUIREMENTS FOR THE “PRODUCT OF USA” LABEL CLAIM AGENCY SEEKS COMMENTS ON PROPOSED RULE

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) on March 6 released a proposed rule with new regulatory requirements to better align the voluntary “Product of USA” label claim with consumer understanding of what the claim means. The proposed rule allows the voluntary “Product of USA” or “Made in the USA” label claim to be used on meat, poultry, and egg products only when they are derived from animals born, raised, slaughtered, and processed in the United States. Today’s announcement delivers on one of the key actions in President Biden’s Executive Order on Promoting Competition in the American Economy, and a commitment made in the Biden-Harris Administration’s Action Plan for a Fairer, More Competitive, and More Resilient Meat and Poultry Supply Chain. The increased clarity and transparency provided by this proposed change would prevent consumer confusion and help ensure that consumers understand where their food comes from.

“American consumers expect that when they buy a meat product at the grocery store, the claims they see on the label mean what they say,” said Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack. “These proposed changes are intended to provide consumers with accurate information to make informed purchasing decisions. Our action today affirms USDA’s commitment to ensuring accurate and truthful product labeling.”

USDA’s proposed rulemaking is supported by petitions, thousands of comments from stakeholders, and data. In July 2021, USDA initiated a comprehensive review to understand what the “Product of USA” claim means to consumers and inform planned rulemaking to define the requirements for making such a claim. As part of its review, USDA commissioned a nationwide consumer survey. The survey revealed that the current “Product of USA” labeling claim is misleading to a majority of consumers surveyed, with a significant portion believing the claim means that the product was made from animals born, raised, slaughtered, and processed in the United States.

USDA’s comprehensive review shows there is a clear need to revise the current “Product of USA” label claim so that it more accurately conveys U.S. origin information.

Under the proposed rule, the “Product of USA” label claim would continue to be voluntary. It would also remain eligible for generic label approval, meaning it would not need to be pre-approved by USDA’s Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) before it could be used on regulated product, but would require supporting documentation to be on file for agency inspection personnel to verify. The rulemaking also proposes to allow other voluntary U.S. origin claims we see on meat, poultry, and egg products sold in the marketplace. These claims would need to include a description on the package of all preparation and processing steps that occurred in the United States upon which the claim is made.

USDA encourages stakeholders, both domestic and international, to comment on the proposed rule. The proposed rule will be open for public comment for 60 days after publishing in the Federal Register. Public comments can be submitted at regulations.gov.

USDA touches the lives of all Americans each day in so many positive ways. In the Biden-Harris Administration, USDA is transforming America’s food system with a greater focus on more resilient local and regional food production, fairer markets for all producers, ensuring access to safe, healthy, and nutritious food in all communities, building new markets and streams of income for farmers and producers using climate smart food and forestry practices, making historic investments in infrastructure and clean energy capabilities in rural America, and committing to equity across the Department by removing systemic barriers and building a workforce more representative of America. Certified South Carolina Strawberry Farms

Strawberry season came early in South Carolina this year — so we decided to run our strawberry farm listing in not one but two issues of Market Bulletin. If you have any revisions to this list, let us know by emailing emoore@scda.sc.gov for consideration for the April 6 issue.

Some farms are U-pick, while others sell their berries at roadside stands and local markets. Some farms may shift business models mid-season, inviting guests on the farm for U-pick only during the busiest times. In fact, some may not even be open yet for the year. It's best to track the farms on Facebook or Instagram and/or contact them before you visit.
